Weather Indications.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Forecast till 8 p. m. Tuesday.—For Kansas: Fair, slightly rising temperature Tuesday afternoon; northeasterly winds becoming southeasterly.

TWO YEARS ago Tom Reed was elected to congress by about 1,700 majority. He is returned this year by about 10,000. The voters of this country believe in the Tom Reed brand of men.—Lincoln Republican.

If Tom Reed remains true to silver, he is the right brand for president in 1896, too.

A FAIR is to be given October 4 to 6 at Garden City to show the result of irrigation in the southwest. Particularly will specimens of fruits and vegetables be shown that were raised by pump irrigation. This will be a great source of information on the subject of irrigation by the new system.

LINCOLN Republican: The Topeka Daily STATE JOURNAL printed a picture of its press last week, and also told how it had grown in circulation this summer. The STATE JOURNAL is a mighty good evening paper, and the large number of people who read it here are satisfied with the fact that they are getting the worth of their money out of it.

THE Rev. Jerry Botkin, who quit preaching some time ago to reform the world as a Populist orator, is now having in his judgment his potency for good, will be a candidate for congress in the Third district. The Rev. Jerry will come up against a wicked and carnal manifestation of the corruption works of the world, the flesh and the devil in the shape of W. F. Sapp's "barrel," after which he will retire for a season from politics while he meditates in private over the unsatisfactory rewards conferred by an ungrateful people on a great reformer.—Fl. Scott Monitor.

A great deal has been said about Mr. Sapp's barrel. Now, really, how much money has Mr. Sapp to spend on his election?

WHEN it is thought desirable to abuse a man in Kansas politics, it is stated that Pete Kline paid him some money. Pete Kline is a lottery man operating in Kansas City, Kas., and has been accused of giving away more money as bribes than he ever saw. It would be interesting to hear Pete Kline's side of the story.—Atchison Globe.

The above is about true. These Pete Kline stories that never seem to materialize into anything tangible are getting frightfully stale. Pete Kline is always giving away thousands of dollars here and thousands of dollars there, but nobody ever seems to know the facts. Now until somebody does know them a suffering public begs that there be a general drying up on the subject. When the STATE JOURNAL publishes a statement it gets the facts or else it keeps still until it can get them. Windy guesses are not news.

THE TRIUMPH OF TILLMAN.

The old Democratic machine has been smashed in South Carolina. Let no one assume from this circumstance that the solid south is broken. Every southern state will probably be found in line for the Democratic candidate for president in 1896 as usual. But the Tillmanites have demolished the old Democratic bulldozing organization of the state and have engrafted upon the Chicago platform, the declaration of principles formulated at Ocala.

It is fitting that this sort of iconoclasm should begin in South Carolina. There has always been a spirit of independence and resistance to the existing order of things lurking among the people within her borders. During the darkest days of the revolutionary struggle for American independence, when the cause throughout the country seemed well nigh hopeless, the people of the Palmetto state under the leadership of General Francis Marion were waging a vigorous and aggressive warfare. Under the administration of President Jackson it was South Carolina that attempted to nullify the laws of the general government. In secession days it was on the soil of this state that the first armed resistance to the Union was made.

So the supporters of Governor Tillman have not only destroyed the old machine but they have captured all the parts and have set up a new one built on their own model, and they are going to run it in their own way. The old gang haven't enough left to even organize a bolt and the men who have been accustomed for so many years to carry everything in their own high-handed way are compelled to sit on the fence and watch the procession go by. Their delegates were in the convention but not of it. The new element in control may not prove any better than the old but the change is an omen favorable to an improved order of things in the future. South Carolina may be safely counted on as being all right on the silver question, although she has been all wrong on a good many others.

BRICE AND FREE COINAGE.

The declaration of Senator Calvin S. Brice that the free silver plank adopted by the state convention of his party in Ohio is not binding on him is not so inconsistent as it may at first appear to be, when it is considered that he is in reality a citizen of the state of New York. His views on the silver question are very popular with a large class of New Yorkers, particularly those along Wall street in the metropolis.

Senator Brice says when we say "free silver" we may mean a variety of things. That may be his interpretation of the term but it is not the meaning which is conveyed to the people by the expression. When the Democrats of Ohio speak of "free silver" they, and the masses of all parties throughout the country, understand it to mean the remonetization of silver, and that when anyone possesses silver bullion in any amount, which is the product of American mines, he can take it to the government mint and receive for each 412½ grains thereof a coined silver dollar containing 374½ grains of pure silver, the difference which equals the alloy, going to the government. This is so plain a proposition that even Senator Brice need not err therein.

The senator need not be unduly alarmed about any "apprehension on the part of the people" if "two-thirds of the house and senate were elected on silver platforms," provided the silver platforms are those which have been adopted by every political party this year, covering a considerable number of states. He and the other people who agree with him are destined to learn the meaning of "free silver" at no distant day and the lesson will be plain. His repudiation of his own party platform will not serve to stem the tide that has set in all over the country. He is likely to be trying to exchange sugar trust stocks for stocks in silver mines before the expiration of his present term of office.

OVERBROOK Herald: One of the most astonishing newspaper growths ever witnessed in the west is that of the STATE JOURNAL, Topeka. From a little four-page paper printed on an old press, with no circulation to speak of half a dozen years ago, the JOURNAL has, under Mr. MacLennan's management, grown to an influential 8-page paper with an average daily circulation of 8,806 copies. One of the crowning features of its success is its web perfecting press.

MORE SCENERY TONIGHT.

Lincoln Carter's "Tornado" Will Blow at the Grand This Evening.

The audience that witnessed the "Fast Mail" at the Grand Saturday night was smaller than that of either of the preceding nights, and not so enthusiastic. Applause was frequent, however, and the scenery got a considerable share of it. Miss Buckingham's new song was well received. The company is playing one night stands in Missouri this week.

Tonight Lincoln Carter's other scenic success, "The Tornado," will open a two nights' stand at the same house. It is in the first act of this piece that you see a realistic tornado, which has no mercy on trees or buildings. In the third act two steamers collide in mid-ocean. There is also a clever dissecting room scene, and the Chicago wharf scene is also good.

After tomorrow night the house will be dark until Saturday night when Gustave Frohman's big company will open in Oscar Wilde's comedy, "Lady Windermere's Fan," which made such a tremendous hit in the east. It will be repeated on Monday evening, October 1.

IS A GOOD INJUN NOW.

GERONIMO IS EXTREMELY AMIABLE WHILE IN CAPTIVITY.

But the People of Arizona Think It Will Not Take the Bloodthirsty Old Savage Long to Find the Warpath if He Is Once Tamed Loose.

Gerónimo and his Chiricahuas are to be free again, and Arizona is displeased thereat. The frontiersmen say the old Indian is as bloodthirsty as ever, and that if he and his once get loose in the White mountains many a life will be lost before they are corralled again. But General Howard says that an Indian 68 years old, as Gerónimo is, is of no account for any purpose of activity, and that this particular Indian is much more afraid of the frontier folks than they are of him. Old Gerónimo's latest opinion of the whites was thus expressed in a recent conversation with Lieutenant Guy Howard, son of the general:

"At first I thought that you white men, who have put railroads and telegraph wires around the world, could get us our farms in a few days, but now I know it will take time. But I believe that we will get them; that you will take us from this place, where we are dying, and will put us where we can work and earn a living for ourselves and our children."

"I believe white men have kind hearts. They will catch a wild deer in the woods and tame and teach it to feed from their hands and follow their steps. They will take a wild bird from the tree top and make it feed from their lips and come at their voice. We are like the deer and the wild bird. We listen for your voice, and we follow your steps."

This was said at Mount Vernon barracks, Alabama, where the Chiricahuas captives have been for the last six years living in indolence and with abundance of good things, but never ceasing to pine for their native mountains. Mount Vernon barracks are, according to lovers of the picturesque, the most beautiful army post in the country, situated about six miles north of Mobile and in a paradise of oak, magnolia and other subtropical trees and shrubs. The climate is in every way unlike that of Arizona, and the Indians suffered accordingly, so it was once decided to remove them to the Fort Sill reservation, in Indian Territory, but that was promptly vetoed when the border men pointed out the obvious fact that they could easily escape thence and make their way back to Arizona.

It is hard to believe that the Apaches, bloodthirsty and untamable, are first cousins to the progressive and rather pleasant Navajos, but both are from the same great offshoot of the Athabascans. The Navajos combined with a remnant of the old and semicivilized Mexican Indians and have maintained an art and civilization of their own, while the Apaches took to the mountains and grew more savage every year. Fifty years ago the department estimated that in Mexico and the United States they could muster 80,000 warriors. This was an exaggeration, but still they were very powerful. When General Crook went at them 20 years ago, they did not have to exceed 1,500 warriors, yet that small number had pretty nearly depopulated Arizona.

In 1872 the hostiles of that territory were in three great bands, the greatest under the famous Cochise. General Howard, with a single aid, penetrated to his mountain fastness and made a treaty which Cochise kept honorably till his death. Gerónimo broke away, and a long and rather romantic war followed. In 1883 General Crook captured the whole band, numbering 600, and located them on a reservation, but Gerónimo and Neches broke away again, murdered 134 whites and escaped into Mexico. In 1886 General Miles captured the last of the hostiles, their surrender being on the agreement that their lives were to be spared. In two years they had killed 176 Americans.

They claim that one of the terms of the surrender was that they were not to be taken out of Arizona, but they were sent to Fort Pickens, Florida, and later to Fort Marion, near St. Augustine. Their native land is very high and very dry, with cool nights; their land of captivity is low, moist and hot. In the former they had a range over some 40,000 to 60,000 square miles, and in the latter they were confined to a few acres. Yet they did not all die, as might have been expected. Many of their young people have been fairly well educated. The lads are employed in Pennsylvania as cattle herders and farmhands and the girls at the domestic occupations. Day schools and Sunday schools have been successfully maintained among them, and those enlisted in the army have made good soldiers. Meantime another large branch of the Apaches has been located in the Indian Territory, and civilization has made great progress among them. So it has been decided to allow the old prisoners to die at home and the youths to start anew there.

An Englishman at Wichita recently bought four watermelons and shipped them to England as a present. The express charges were $19.

A music teacher at Florence advertises music lessons at hard times prices. He will go so far even as to give his pupils notes for their patronage.

A young man at Wichita is lying at the point of death from cigarette smoking. He has a finger stain that is the envy of every cigarette smoker in town.

Six wagons, forty head of horses and cattle and several families from Phillips county passed through Stockton the other day bound for Louisiana.

Sixteen people in Mitchell county are busily engaged in bottling mineral water. This summer's experience is sufficient to make almost anybody provident.

Dr. Tarpaddle is the alias of a man who was in the Manhattan police court for beating his wife. Released on his own recognizance he concluded to skedaddle.

A horse sale at Ogden recently the animals only brought from $1 to $30 apiece. The force of the expression "A horse on you" becomes more apparent every day.

CHINESE THIS TIME.

Judge Ensminger has a New Class in Languages this Morning.

Judge Ensminger is getting a little bit discouraged. He has spent many sleepless nights studying Syrian, Russian and German to qualify himself more thoroughly for his duties on the bench and had just begun to congratulate himself on his efficiency as a linguist when the Chinese class dropped in and paralyzed him this morning.

Fannie Wright was tangled up in it from force of habit. Wah Lee runs a laundry on east Seventh street and says two colored girls stole two packages of clothes from him last evening. He ran out and got one and then went back after the other. He met Fannie and Annie Gay who he says are the girls who first took the clothes, and called Officer Jones to arrest them.

There was some dispute about it, in which several of the parties were hit over the head with boards, and Jones was compelled to put the chain on Fanny before she would accept his escort to the police station. She told a good story in court this morning, but the judge fined her $5, which she paid.

Wm. Schlegel keeps a meat market on West Sixth street. He also keeps some dogs there. Saturday evening little Dorman Young was coming along the sidewalk pounding with a stick, when one of the dogs ran out and bit him on the leg. The case was up in court this morning, but the judge deferred his decision till tomorrow.

R. R. Henneman pleaded guilty to carrying a concealed revolver, and was fined $5, which he paid.

The case against Harry Palmer, the farmer, who was arrested for intoxication Friday evening, was dismissed.

UGHT TO BE REMEDIED.

District Clerk's Office in the Wrong Place in the New Court House.

"I have just noticed" said a leading Topeka lawyer today "that the plans of the new court house contemplate putting the court room and district clerk's office on different floors."

"Those who have business with the court should register a mighty kick against this arrangement. We have had enough of that in the old court house. A lawyer has to go to the clerk's office three or four times in the trial of a single case and the records have to be carried up and down stairs continually. Even the little court houses which are being built throughout the state have the court room and clerk's office on the same floor."

"The county commissioners are responsible for this old fashioned arrangement and a protest should be made at once by those who are interested."

It may not yet be too late to remedy this matter. The JOURNAL would like to hear from other lawyers about it.
